

RETURNS TO BRIDE'S HOME.

Count Naselli, with American Wife, Goes to Philadelphia as Italian Vice-Consul.

WAS VICE-CONSUL HERE.

Was Instrumental in Establishing Exemption of Foreign Consular Representatives from Service of Attachments

Among the passengers arriving on the Stella was the Countess Naselli, who, accompanied by her wife and two children, has come to this country to be Italian Consul in Philadelphia.

The Countess Naselli, a handsome brunette, was formerly Mrs. Amelia Spies, of this city. She married the Baron in 1886, when he was Italian Vice-Consul here.

Naselli's reappearance here recalls a question of diplomatic etiquette which excited considerable attention in 1930. The controversy hinged upon his claim of exemption from service of attachment papers.

While the Italian squadron was here during the Columbian celebration in 1893 Enrico Bertl, a coal dealer, made a contract for coaling the vessels. He deposited $1,000 with Consul-General De Riva as security. Salvatore Guadagno, a creditor of Bertl, procured an attachment in the City Court against this money.

A deputy sheriff attempted to serve the papers upon Count Naselli, as Vice-Consul, but the latter refused to accept them. The matter was laid before Secretary of State Gresham, who decided that the fact that the money was deposited as security for the performance of a contract with a foreign government would exempt it from levy or seizure.

Old Nurse's Trouble.

With Count Naselli's family there traveled an old Italian nurse named Chiappi Lauretta, whom the Naselli children are passionately attached to. When the Count booked the passages he found that there was not sufficient accommodation to include Chiappi as a saloon passenger. She had to travel steerage, much to the indignation of the children.

Upon the vessel's arrival yesterday it was further discovered that Chiappi's humiliation was not yet at an end. She would have to go to Ellis Island with the rest of the steerage passengers. The Countess Naselli protested, the children wept and the Count stormed.

Immigration Inspector Flanagan was at a loss to know what to do under such unusual circumstances. He finally solved the problem by getting the Commissioner of Immigration to grant the Countess the courtesy of the port, and the Naselli children bore off their old Chiappi in triumph.

LINCOLN'S WOE INCREASES.

Bailed by Wife, Charged by Friend with Fraud.

Davenport Lincoln, the young man from Long Island City who was lured to the Waldorf by his wife and then arrested, had another charge of petty larceny made against him to-day. Charles Stiner, of No. 31 Johnson avenue, charged him with having concealed $5 from him through false pretenses. Lincoln's wife has evidently forgiven him, as she has been bringing him his meals at the jail for the past week.

COUNT AND COUNTESS NASELLI, WHO ARRIVED HERE TO-DAY FROM ITALY.

ACTRESS SAYS MAN WOULD KILL HER.

Miss Van Wicklen, of the "Fatal Wedding" Company, Has Fireman John Hennessy Brought to Court.

Jessie Van Wicklen, now appearing in the "Fatal Wedding" at a Brooklyn theatre, was complainant against John Hennessy, formerly a fireman for the Standard Oil Company in Williamsburg, whom she charges with threatening to kill her.

Miss Van Wicklen, through her attorney, James Powers, told Magistrate Smith that the Hennessy family had been evicted from their home, and at her solicitation her mother, Mrs. Horatio Schupp, of No. 45 Waverly place, offered to take them in until they could find another place. She said Hennessy then went away and, returning drunk, threatened to shoot her.

Hennessy denied that he tried to kill Miss Van Wicklen. He said he was evicted from his home by ex-Alderman P. W. White because he had been a supporter of Borough President Cassidy. He explained that when Mr. Cassidy heard of his eviction he told him to move his family into No. 45 Waverly place. Miss Van Wicklen, he declared, was endeavoring to persecute him.

TOO COSTLY TO TRY THE NURSES.

District Attorney Jerome Tells the Court So in Having Brutality Indictments Dismissed.

Because of the expense of a trial District Attorney Jerome to-day secured the dismissal of the indictment against Michael Carroll and John Foley, attendants in the Manhattan State Asylum, charged with manslaughter in having caused the death of Herbert C. Wadman on March 5, 1901.

The indictments were returned by the Grand Jury against the nurses after much had been published in the newspapers regarding the brutality with which nurses in the State asylum were accustomed to treat patients.

A medical examination of Wadman's body showed that all of his ribs had been broken and that he had received internal injuries which caused his death. Carroll and Foley were indicted, charged with manslaughter in the first degree.

District Attorney Jerome personally appeared before Justice Newburger in Part I of General Sessions to-day and asked for the dismissal of the indictment. He said a trial would only result in a conflict of medical testimony, involving expense to the county.

George C. Austin, of No. 192 Broadway, the well-known Republican politician and ex-Assemblyman, represented the two men.

LEARNED VICTIM OF CHLORAL BETTER.

Princeton Faculty and the Student Body Rejoicing at the Hope of Recovery of Prof. Humphreys.

(Special to The Evening World.)

PRINCETON, N. J., Sept. 24.—Prof. Willard Humphreys, head of the German Department, who has been in a comatose condition since Sunday night as a result of an overdose of chloral hydrate, gained consciousness this morning and there seems at present to be every hope for his recovery.

Not until this morning had the attendants at his bedside been able to stop the use of artificial respiration. It was required the constant attention of several men to watch the stupor of the professor, and to apply the means for his recovery.

This morning when Prof. Humphreys came to himself for the first time, the attendants walked him up and down the room in an endeavor to guard against another relapse into sleep.

A dose of chloral of over five grains is considered fatal. It is almost certain that Prof. Humphreys took more than this amount. It is still generally believed that the first dose dulled his mind and that the second dose was taken while he was partly unconscious.

He referred in a jovial way to his long sleep and talked sensibly about his classes and other affairs. The community of professors and students is rejoicing this morning over his recovery.

RISKED HIS LIFE STOPPING RUNAWAY

Policeman Hefferan Hung on to Plunging Horse, Which Had Scattered Canal Street Throng.

At the risk of his life Policeman Hefferan, of the Elizabeth street station, stopped a runaway horse to-day at Canal and Centre streets.

The animal, which was attached to a light delivery wagon from the establishment of C. H. & E. S. Goldberg, of West Broadway and Reade street, shied at a piece of paper thrown from a passing electric car and before the driver could control him broke into a gallop.

At Canal and Centre streets a wheel of the wagon caught in the car tracks and was wrenched off and the vehicle was swung around, imperiling a number of pedestrians, who scattered, while the horse dashed on.

Hefferan jumped for the horse's head and grabbing the bridle swung himself from the ground bringing his whole weight on the animal's head. The horse plunged, but Hefferan hung on, finally stopping.

A dozen men who witnessed the police officer's feat complimented him. One of them, James A. Kenny, of No. 369 Broadway, said he would write a letter to Police Commissioner Partridge telling of Hefferan's act.

ALARM OUT FOR RUNAWAY PUPILS.

MRS. KELLY PUTS END TO GOSSIP.

Mother-in-Law of Frank Gould Quashes Rumors of Quarrels with Son-in-Law by Boarding Helenita.

Because some of the gossips in society have it that there has been an estrangement between Frank J. Gould and his mother-in-law, Mrs. Edward Kelly, of No. 17 East Thirty-second street, is putting an end to the story to-day by being a guest on board Mr. Gould's yacht, the Helenita, which is lying at anchor in the North River, and on board which the stricken paid a visit to Mrs. Gould.

According to the rumors, Mr. Gould had forbidden his wife to keep up her social connections after marriage, and that Mrs. Kelly had protested so vigorously against this that there had been a falling out. It also was said that Mrs. Kelly was angered because of Mr. Gould's refusal to allow his wife to stay in her mother's home for the interesting recent event.

It is to put all these rumors at rest that Mrs. Kelly is aboard the yacht to-day fondling her little granddaughter. She has said through a friend that her son-in-law was any trouble between herself and her son-in-law.

BROOKLYN BURGLAR USES CHLOROFORM

William Heinrich and His Wife Awake, Suffering, Find Jewelry and Rich Silverware Gone and Room Rifled.

Crime-ridden Brooklyn had another robbery added to its long list when William Heinrich and his wife, of No. 1222 Degraw street, awoke early to-day to find their room had been entered by burglars and robbed of jewelry worth $500. Mr. and Mrs. Heinrich suffered violently from headaches and found evidence to indicate that they had been chloroformed by the burglar.

The couple slept on the third floor of the house. Close to their bed stood a bureau containing the jewelry, consisting of diamond rings, brooches and two gold watches. When they awoke both were suffering. Everything was in disorder.

The case which had contained the jewelry was found open, but the contents were missing. Solid silverware had been taken, also, plated ware was undisturbed. On the table was a napkin fashioned into some shape and it had the odor of chloroform on it.

The footprints of a man and a boy were found in the yard.
